For Power Brokers, a Mix of Highs and Lows

If there is one word that best describes the results of RISMedia's 28th Annual Power Broker Report, it is "contradiction." The varying complexion of markets across the country has Power Brokers confronting very different circumstances and, therefore, different levels of success.

Overall, Power Brokers experienced growth in 2015, with the Top 1,000 respondents collectively reporting a more than $150 billion increase in sales volume, and nearly 250,000 more transactions over 2014—a clear reflection of low inventory and rising prices. That said, this year's results are punctuated by many extremes—big gains for some, big losses for others.

As always, it's all about location. While some areas have been bolstered by employment gains, others have been hit hard by unemployment. Inventory represents another contradiction in today's market; while inventory shortage is boxing out first-time homebuyers and stalling business in many areas of the country, in others, a dearth of homes is driving sales figures way up, thanks to rising home values and buyer bidding wars.

Throw the unpredictability of the looming presidential election into the mix and it's easy to understand why the majority of respondents (58 percent) described their Broker Confidence Level for the future as "Cautiously Optimistic," even though the majority (45 percent) also described their markets as "Growing."

You'll find the comprehensive findings from our 2016 Power Broker Survey in this special publication, including:

- » The Top 1,000 Power Broker Firms by Sales Volume
- » The Top 1,000 Power Broker Firms by Transactions

To all the Power Brokers who made the list this year, and to all the real estate practitioners working hard to create their own success, we extend our sincerest congratulations and utmost admiration. Your tenacity and positivity inspire us all.

Based on the Top 1,000 respondents to RISMedia's 2016 Power Broker Survey

Encouraged by a post-recession housing market that continues to tick upward, Power Brokers are generally positive, but carefully watching the future, with 58 percent describing their confidence level as “cautiously optimistic.” While certain tailwinds stand to accelerate growth (low interest rates, pent-up demand), several headwinds may get in the way (the presidential election, low inventory). That’s why respondents to RISMedia’s 28th Annual Power Broker Survey are focused on fortifying their agent force with new blood, better training, and the right resources to increase business, no matter what the market hands them in the months ahead.

The results of RISMedia’s Power Broker Survey* reflect the overall pattern of the housing market last year. While 45 percent described their markets as “growing,” “stable” was a close second. Power Brokers reported a collective $1,122,683,341,677 in sales volume and 3,459,233 transactions. This represents a more than $150 billion increase in sales volume over 2014, and nearly 250,000 more transactions—a clear indicator of low inventory driving prices higher.

While many positive indicators bode well for an even better 2016, certain factors may have the unintended consequences of thwarting the market’s potential.

Helen Hanna Casey, president of regional leader Howard Hanna Real Estate, is well aware of the impending conflict in this year’s market. “2016 is off to an incredible start, and it looks to continue for the coming months,” she reports. “High rents and low interest rates will continue to drive the first-time buyers’ market. With slight increases in inventory, move-up buyers are gaining momentum. But it’s an election year, and there is a volatile stock market, which affects the luxury buyer and seller.”

Of course, the scenario varies based on location, with many brokers in hot markets experiencing significant increases in 2015. “We are anticipating another strong year in 2016,” says Tom Tognoli, founder, president and CEO of Intero Real Estate. “We expect the pace of appreciation to slow down a bit, but with a lack of inventory, low unemployment, and low interest rates, I do believe that property values will continue to appreciate, especially in the San Francisco Bay Area and Silicon Valley.”

“This is a historic time for the real estate industry, and the wild ride will continue into 2016,” says Lennox Scott, president and CEO of the Pacific Northwest’s John L. Scott Real Estate. “Inventory in markets closest to job centers is desperately low, and what was a ‘quick action’ market is now an ‘instant response’ one for homebuyers. Because this is such a frenzied market, we are arming our brokers with the best tools possible.”

THE PROS AND CONS OF LOW INVENTORY

Rei Mesa, president and CEO of Berkshire Hathaway HomeServices Florida Realty is battling inventory challenges in the Sunshine State. “We’re experiencing some headwinds related to inventory here. It’s still pretty tight—we have four months of inventory in the single-family sector, and a healthy market is six months,” he explains. “For first-time and entry-level buyers, the lack of inventory and price appreciation we’ve experienced over the last several years are challenging. Even though interest rates are low, prices have inched back up, so there is a lack of choices.”

But despite those factors, the desire to buy is strong. “There is a great deal of pent-up demand,” adds Mesa. “Rental vacancies are near zero. Rents have risen higher than actual sales prices as a percentage. These factors should translate into a higher number of transactions in the future.”

Inventory challenges are not just relegated to coastal markets, either. According to Dan Elsea, president of Brokerage Services for Michigan’s Real Estate One, among the biggest concerns for buyers is finding a home to buy, “particularly in the mid- to lower-price ranges. I think as the market settles down through this year, inventories should rise and give some relief to buyers. We have been seeing that in the upper-end markets for the past 12 months. Finding listing inventory will still be the primary focus this year, even as the market settles down, so agents will need to be creative in reaching out to their sphere.”

“Like most markets, we do not have a huge inventory of affordable housing and new construction,” agrees Dorcas Helfant-Browning, managing partner and principal broker of Coldwell Banker Professional, REALTORS® in Virginia Beach, Va. “We represent several core cities and several counties, and our hotter cities are hot with multiple offers. Others have less job opportunities. Employment is low, and many people are under-employed. Local economists tell us employment is down 10 percent, but we’ve also grown 10.5 percent. For us, that’s a win because we’ve sustained jobs.”

THE MILLENNIAL PROMISE

Despite their staggering student-loan debt and alleged disinterest in owning a home, millennials hold much promise for real estate, say respondents.

“Millennials are poised to dominate the housing market in the coming years, and we’re positioning Long & Foster and our agents to appeal to their needs and wants in a variety of ways,” says Jeff Detwiler, president and COO of the Mid-Atlantic powerhouse, Long & Foster Real Estate. “We’ve increased our focus on technology, recognizing both the power it provides our agents and company in terms of growth and its appeal to millennials. We became a part-owner of Moxi Works, a real estate tech company, in 2015, and that investment positions our company and our agents on the leading edge of real estate tech—a place you’ll find many millennials.”

According to Coach REALTORS® Branch Manager Whitney Finn LaCosta, appealing to millennial homebuyers in the firm’s Long Island, N.Y.-based market requires bringing more millennials into the company fold—and that goes beyond technology. “They want to be part of a like-minded group, and that group must have high ethical standards,” says LaCosta. “The high ethical standards part is easy because that has always been part of the Coach REALTORS® culture. To help create the group environment they’re looking for, we have developed a Young Professionals network within our company.”

Joe Rand, managing partner of Westchester, N.Y.-based Better Homes and Gardens Rand Realty, adds a word of caution when it comes to millennials, suggesting that the differences between them and other generations are “often over-hyped.”

“Obviously, you need to be more tech-savvy with younger agents and clients, but that’s always been the case,” says Rand. “With regard to clients, millennials respond to fundamentals the same way everyone else does. Agents need to know their inventory, be able to explain the buying process, communicate openly and frequently, manage a transaction...all that good stuff. And with regard to agents, I do think that brokers need to be a little more sensitive to the fact that millennials want a more 'customizable' career path that responds to their needs, rather than the cookie-cutter approach that many brokers have traditionally taken. But in the end, millennial agents want what every agent wants: good training and coaching, solid resources and tools, uplifting branding, and a fair split."

OUTSMARTING THE MARKET

To succeed in the year ahead and beyond will require a strategy that takes both the market's challenges and opportunities into account.

"We anticipate that 2016 will outperform 2015," says John Paul Horning, executive vice president of Wisconsin's Shorewest REALTORS®. "We have already seen increased demand due to low rates and an improving job market. We are also experiencing a tighter inventory of homes for sale, which is supporting an increase in home prices."

Hanna Casey says that success path forward will require a focus on target marketing. "We need to better understand market segments and how to capture them and keep them through multi-media, multi-generational marketing."

Savvy brokers will seize the opportunity to turn economic uncertainty into an advantage. "We see a big opportunity with the chaos in the stock market to attract people to real estate investments as a safe, local investment," says Caroline Ruhl, president and co-owner of Iowa's Ruhl & Ruhl REALTORS®. "We have a speaker scheduled to come in and train our agents on how to sell investment real estate and then in the evening they can invite their clients back in to hear the speaker explain the advantages of investing in real estate."

Preparing agents for both the challenges and opportunities in the current marketplace is a priority for Jim Fite, president and CEO of CENTURY 21 Judge Fite Company, serving the Dallas/Fort Worth Metroplex. "With listings being par with the last two years, our multiple offers are significant in number—upward of 30 offers on hot properties within 72 hours of listing," says Fite. "The biggest opportunities are recruiting new and experienced real estate professionals. As our marketing is very strong, new recruiting, onboarding, and training opportunities are paying off."

Looking past the uncertainties of 2016, Power Brokers see clear sailing on the horizon. "The real estate industry follows the cycles and reacts according to the law of supply and demand," says Alexander Karavasiliis, president and CEO of Maryland's RE/MAX Advantage Realty. "Absent any extraordinary events, inventory levels are stabilizing, interest rates remain at historical lows, and the desire for the American Dream is burning as bright as ever. If the regulatory body releases the overall chokehold on the industry and related industries, we will see increased activity and healthier markets." RE

"Overall

has declined. Buyers need to know that their employment is stable and that their income will grow.

When one considers the political climate in this election year and the difficulties being faced in the energy sector caused by oil and gas-price falls, and state budget challenges... it plants a good deal of uncertainty in the minds of would-be buyers. But underlying demand is extremely strong and it speaks well to us having very strong housing markets in 2016/2017."

PROS AND CONS FOR 2016

"We are coming off of 3 - 4 boom years with an incredibly and historically low available supply of properties in Silicon Valley. January 2016 set yet another record low for available supply. Our sense and forecast is that the inventory levels will accelerate more and sooner this spring, which may ultimately produce a more lubricated and balanced market for buyers and sellers."

- Chris Trapani, Sereno Group,
Silicon Valley/Santa Cruz, Calif.

"I don't believe the housing market will differ greatly from 2015. The general housing market looks good in 2016. There will be continued pricing and inventory challenges at specific price points in certain market areas. I think as the housing market continues to improve, more first-time homebuyers will enter the market, and at the same time, it will be a very competitive environment for real estate investors. Unemployment, jobs, and the economy will ultimately determine the market's momentum."

- Steve Summers,
Realty Executives of Kansas City

"California's recovery has made affordability a problem. The lack of inventory and rumbles of a recession leave me optimistically nervous. We are continuing to educate sellers about their equity position. Many sellers do not realize that values are back above the crash level. As sellers make their next life move, that will bring more homes to market."

- Gretchen Pearson,
Berkshire Hathaway HomeServices
Drysdale Properties, Danville, Calif.

WHERE RESOURCES ARE GOING

"As the demographics of our region have changed, we have actively recruited bilingual agents and staff to serve that market."

- Robert Bailey, Bailey Properties, Aptos, Calif.

"We have received a great deal of interest in team development and growth, and have implemented training curriculum to address this need. Supporting agent teams is a close second to training and coaching."

- Tyler Lein, RE/MAX Excalibur, Scottsdale, Ariz.

"2016 is poised to be a record year for Homesale. We expect our investments in technology, agent coaching, and new agent training to yield sustainable growth."

- Rod Messick, Berkshire Hathaway HomeServices Homesale Realty, Maryland and Pennsylvania

"In 2015, one of my personal initiatives was to cultivate our international relations. Everywhere I went, I explained our value proposition, why our markets are ideal for living and investing, and I showed them our beautiful properties. As a result, our company is coming into 2016 strong with opportunities we never imagined. Every company says they're global, and yes, our sign is recognizable in many countries, but when you have personal relationships with foreigners, you have their trust."

- Judy Green, Premier Sotheby's Intl. Realty, Naples, Fla.

Services Offered by Power Brokers

Based on the Top 1,000 respondents to RISMedia's 2016 Power Broker Survey

"We are evaluating growth options; we may add two kiosk spaces this year in advance of two much larger physical footprints in 1 - 2 locations. Our biggest challenge is getting out of our own way and making sure the mindset of our office-level leadership is right; if they believe they are saturated and can't handle any more business, they won't try to grow."

- Dave Sansom, Carolina One Real Estate, Charleston, S.C.

"We are seeing a shift in how agents work from physical space in our branch offices to more flexible work environments due to the increased capabilities of mobile communications."

- Kevin Walsh, CENTURY 21 New Millennium, Northern Virginia/Washington, D.C.

"We intend to have more 'out-desk' space for agents to come and work for a few hours or a day."

- Caroline Weiss, Keller Williams Realty Capital District, Albany, N.Y.

"We are focusing our efforts to create a highly sustainable office. We are approaching 200 agents, and will reach 300 in the next couple years. We are not a virtual office, but we focus on working with mobile agents, and will focus on helping teams grow their businesses by leveraging our staff, and our model, to help them make more money by focusing on their production."

- Terry Swanson, CENTURY 21 Results Realty Services, Cumming, Ga.

"HomeSmart continues to invest heavily in our proprietary technology to ensure we stay ahead of the curve and provide high-touch, all-in-one systems, which enable each brokerage and agent to conduct their real estate businesses efficiently. We are working with each and every location to streamline services and processes by focusing on the strategic business direction each franchise owner desires to move toward."

- Matt Widdows, HomeSmart, Scottsdale, Ariz.

THE AGENT EQUATION

"We have agent roundtables monthly to discuss what they see in the marketplace and what their clients are saying about their experiences in the market. We are also having Top Producer Panels so agents can pick the brains of our leading agents, and lastly, we have mastermind meetings where we invite brokers from other companies to our offices to discuss what they see happening, as well as how their companies are responding to clients. All of this, plus other training we host and attend, keeps us on the cutting-edge."

- Scott MacDonald, RE/MAX Gateway, Northern Virginia

"We look closely at what our external customers tell us through third-party surveys. The numbers have not changed much: 73 percent of our clients and customers come from our agents' sphere of influence and referrals. Internally, everything revolves around our agents—they are our internal customers. Our support staff, management, and ancillary companies all work together to put our agents in a position to succeed and shine."

- John Meesseman, Real Living Kee Realty, Southeast Michigan

"Our local real estate market is stable and improving. Our newer agents are showing a very strong commitment to truly learning the trade, and are motivated and productive in a relatively short period of time. We feel we are spending more time and effort on being more selective, and it is attracting a higher caliber of professional person, and our highly improved training programs are effective. We are excited about the upcoming year!"

- Bob Majorino, Berkshire Hathaway HomeServices California Realty, Visalia, Calif.

"Our most significant step is our personalized apps. Each agent has an app that functions the same way the national apps do, but is completely branded to our agents, which allows them to stay in touch with their clients in an innovative way."

- Rob Talbot, Keller Williams Antelope Valley, Palmdale, Calif.

"Our job is to control our own destiny. Our job is to outrun our competition, keep our agents well-trained, know the local market better than anyone and make the best use of new technology to keep our salesforce efficient."

- Robert Hubbell, Coldwell Banker Hubbell BriarWood, Lansing, Mich.
